STRUGGLE IN SOMME SECTION OF NORTH FRANCE BRINGS NO SUCCESS TO ALLIES

Assault Launched by the Anglo-French Forces Thursday Fails, and Now Is Being Kept Up by the Germans Themselves.

IMPORTANT OPERATIONS EAST OF STRUMA CEASE

London Says Nothing Has Occurred Worth Reporting; Bulgarians Fall Back to Seres Demir Hissar Railroad, Is Claim.

[By Evening Herald Special Wire.] The struggle in the Somme region of northern France, renewed violently with the Anglo-French attack of Thursday night, Berlin declares achieved virtually no success, is being kept up by the Germans themselves. Last night they counter-attacked strongly the French line south of the Somme, driving back the Allies and capturing several villages.

There has been further fighting north of the Somme where the French claim an advance on the Marais de la Riviere. A statement of the French high command in the Somme region is published in London, which says that nothing has occurred worth mentioning. The Bulgarians who have fallen back to the Seres Demir Hissar railroad are said to be making a strong force there.

German Defeat Blown. Paris, Oct. 14.—The German defeat in the Somme is a fact, says the French high command. The French have taken the town of Arras, and the German forces are being driven back to the Seres Demir Hissar railroad.

Divisions Annihilated. Berlin, via wireless to Moscow, Oct. 14.—The German divisions in the Somme region are being annihilated. The French have taken the town of Arras, and the German forces are being driven back to the Seres Demir Hissar railroad.
